FARM AND AG REPORT: WEATHER, PRICES, HARVEST

WEATHER / ENVIRONMENT CANADA

Sunny all week, cold nights

Environment Canada's Brantford forecast, issued 3:30 p.m. Monday, October 19. No alerts in effect. Tuesday: mainly sunny, with fog patches clearing in the morning. Wind northeast 20 km/h becoming light in the afternoon. High 15. UV index 4, moderate. Tuesday night: clear, fog patches overnight, low zero.

Wednesday: sunny, high 15, low plus 3. Thursday: sunny, high 19, low plus 4. Friday: sunny, high 14, low plus 2. Saturday: sunny, high 15, low 6. Sunday: sunny, high 18. Normal for now is a high of 13 and a low of 3. Another dry week for harvest.

CROP PRICES / GFO

Grain markets, Friday, October 16

Friday closing prices, the latest we could confirm when this page was built. Monday's close was not posted yet. Futures in U.S. dollars, from the USDA closing settlement report. Cash bids in Canadian dollars, from the Ontario Commodity Report cash price page (Farm Market News, the Grain Farmers of Ontario price service).

Crop	Futures (U.S.)	Cash (Cdn.), a bushel
Corn	December $4.74 1/4, down 3 3/4 cents	Burford $6.19 2026 crop, $6.17 2027 crop
Soybeans	November $12.61 1/4	Burford $16.71 2026 crop. Brantford $16.96
Wheat	Chicago December $6.60 1/2, down 9 1/2 cents

The day's change in soybean futures is not shown because our sources differ.

LIVESTOCK / BFO

Cattle, latest weekly report

Beef Farmers of Ontario weekly market summary, sales October 9 to 15, Ontario auction averages per hundredweight. Updated October 16. Still the latest when we checked Monday, October 19.

Class	Average
Fed steers over 1,250 lb	$298.24
Fed heifers over 1,000 lb	$293.82
Cows	$163.32
Stocker steers 500 to 599 lb	$630.33

Hogs: we could not read Ontario Pork's daily price page, so we are not printing a hog price today. See ontariopork.on.ca/prices.

HARVEST / GFO

Harvest check

Grain Farmers of Ontario's Field Progress estimate, as of Wednesday, October 14, is still the latest posted: soybeans about 70 per cent harvested, corn about 1 per cent, and winter wheat about 81 per cent planted.

GFO's October 15 field notes say corn moisture is holding up harvest, low humidity is helping dry down, and much of the province has had its first hard frost. Judge test weight on dry grain.

FARM POLICY / ONTARIO

Trade help and the farmland bill

On October 13, Canada and Ontario announced almost $22 million to help more than 130 Ontario farmers and processors find new markets. Bill 109, which would limit foreign buyers of Ontario farmland, is still listed at second reading. Sources: Ontario newsroom, ola.org.

NATIONAL NEWS: ONTARIO

ONTARIO / ELECTRICITY

Ontario will import 600 megawatts of U.S. power this winter

The province's grid operator has signed a six month deal for extra power from a U.S. generator, starting November 1.

Ontario's Independent Electricity System Operator, the IESO, runs the province's power grid. It says it has secured a six month commitment for an extra 600 megawatts of capacity for the coming winter, starting November 1, 2026.

The power will come in as a firm import from Alpha Generation, a U.S. power company that has taken part in past IESO capacity auctions.

The IESO says the step is needed because facility maintenance has been requested to start this winter and run through 2027 and 2028. The extra supply is meant to let that maintenance happen while keeping the grid reliable.

The IESO is also raising the targets in its yearly capacity auction. The target goes from 1,800 to 2,000 megawatts for summer 2027, and from 1,200 to 1,400 megawatts for winter 2027 to 2028.

The cost of the import deal has not been made public. CBC News reported the agreement on Saturday, October 17.

Homes and farms in Brant County are on the same provincial grid, so this is the supply that keeps the lights and barns running here through the cold months.

The deal at a glance

- Amount: 600 megawatts of firm capacity
- From: Alpha Generation, a U.S. power company
- When: six months, starting November 1, 2026
- Why: planned facility maintenance and winter reliability
- Cost: not made public

WARD 3 / DOWNTOWN PARIS Downtown Dig reopening pushed back

The County says the Downtown Dig in Paris is in its final stages, but a parts supply issue has delayed the traffic signals at the William Street intersection. Crews had aimed to fully open the road the week of October 19.

Staff now hope for a late October or very early November full reopening.

BURFORD HISTORY: ALL THOSE YEARS AGO

BURFORD - All Those Years Ago

THE (FORMER) MILES RESIDENCE / FLORIST, BURFORD: The Old Miles Place

By Clayton Barker. Copyright © 2018 to 2026 by Clayton Barker
(Published in The Burford Advance, July 12th 2018)

Many years ago, when I was a young lad attending Maple Ave. Public School, in Burford, the students were given tours of various businesses and interesting places around the village, like Judge's Apiary on Maple Avenue South, and Miles' Greenhouse on King Street West. I recall it may have been around Mother's Day when we toured Miles Greenhouse, as we were each given a small plant to give to our mothers.

The late Roy Miles (Roy Wilbur Miles 1913-1996) the owner of R. C. Miles & Son Florist and greenhouse, at the time, gave us a tour and we were told the story of how Roy's father (Robert Carter Miles 1872-1963), started his florist business with "cold frames" and how he acquired tulip bulbs from Holland, etc. That was the first time I had met Roy, and those tours of the various businesses here in the village were very interesting to me, and the first opportunity I had to walk the streets of Burford, since my brother and I were bussed in from the fourth concession (Woodbury/Tansley).

A few years later, my family moved into the village of Burford and lived on Dufferin Street, which is in the same village block as the former Miles Florist property, bounded by King Street West, Dufferin Street, Jarvis Street and William Street (now Saint William Street). I had a brand new 3-speed bicycle given to me for my tenth birthday and to familiarize myself with my new bicycle (which was slightly too big for me) and my new surroundings, I would ride around the block. For the first while, however, I wasn't allowed to venture off to anywhere beyond our block, so to break up the monotony of just going around and around the block, I would sometimes incorporate the Miles' driveway into my ride too, since it linked Dufferin Street to King Street in the middle of the block.

Roy never minded me using his driveway, as long as I was careful to watch for moving vehicles. Sometimes I would stop to chat with him and his wife Kay while they sat on their back porch. Being the young history buff that I was, I asked Roy if he knew how old his house was, so he took me on a little tour and told me that he figured it would have been built sometime before 1879, the year his grandparents (George and Mary Ann Miles) came there. He also told me that he had tried to make the house look like a much older house by adding dormer windows and porches to it and other renovation work, in the 1940s.

The little stone florist shop, near the front of the property, was built in 1939 (removed recently and the stone incorporated at Bethel Church, near Paris) and according to Roy's son David, who still lives in the Burford area, the first greenhouse built on the property was the large one behind the shop, and there was a tunnel that linked the shop and greenhouse to the main house basement. The present (red) barn, on the east side of the lot, was originally located directly behind the main house but was moved to its present location in the late 1960s. There were other sheds and storage garages and glass-houses on the lot over the years, some of which were demolished in 2010, and the smaller house, which still exists, has now been severed off into a separate lot. The oldest building on the property is the main house (which was being renovated by Dan Brown House Reconstruction when I wrote this article).

Interestingly, though Roy had tried to disguise his house as perhaps an 18th century home in New England with modern features, the strong Canadian colonial look with its die-hard symmetry and front entrance, flanked by sidelights, typical of the first half of the 19th century, still comes through. According to a very old photo published in the Burford Advance (1979) showing the house as it looked in the 1880s, it was a plain and simple looking typical Regency period (1820-1860) home, built with a Georgian influence. It was without shutters or porches in the beginning and the front entrance had a 6-panel door. The lower windows were large-paned double-hung windows in a 6-over-six muntin bar grid, while the upper windows, on the gable-ends, were smaller and narrower, possibly in a 9-over-6 pattern, a carry-over from the British "Window-Tax" era, pre-1851. Also, in the photo you see the 6 members of the Miles family, including Roy's father, and the yards are all enclosed with beautiful white-painted picket fences. Some of the gardening obviously took place actually in the front fenced yard, while several acres of land, in the back lot, was utilized for market gardening.
